

In the last days of America's storied existence secularists gained control over the institutions that shaped the nation's values. Gradually, all ideas regardless of their origin were deemed co-equal. Rights were diminished to self definition and the segmenting of society around collective grievances became government's primary tool by which tyranny found its hold. Absolutes were ridiculed, relativism was elevated to prominence and lauded by elites. The relationship between liberty and faith was eroded, giving way to secularism. During this time a new band of patriots found footing and began the process of restoring the republic to its place of strength predicated on the inseparable link between liberty and faith. In CONGRESS,
July 4, 1776

When in the Course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the Laws of Nature and of Nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness.

That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness. Prudence, indeed, will dictate that Governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and accordingly all experience hath shewn, that mankind are more disposed to suffer, while evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same Object evinces a design to reduce them under absolute Despotism, it is their duty, to throw off such Government, and to provide new Guards for their future security.

A Great Masquerade

Government is a Theatre Troupe

Donald Teel, Editor

Government is a troupe of actors juggling multiple messages, creating a great masquerade, designed to deceive.

The Greeks used the word υποκριτης to indicate the two-faces of comedy and tragedy.

We are led by a national theatre troupe of trained pretenders.

Corruption and deceit, if not altogether accepted, is increasingly viewed as a political norm to be tolerated.

Our Congressional actors wear multiple masks, speak from both sides of their mouths, carefully executing their scripts.

The nation's crippling debt, out of control immigration and insistence on political correctness are all part of the stage play designed to create mood, message and nuance.

Washington DC is fake. The edifices are theatre props, what we see and hear is not real.

Your government is choreographed.

Each prop, every movement and every word is staged and crafted to present fake messages from poised pretenders. It is central casting at its best.

The difference between stage left and stage right is blurred as the actors perform equally well from both sides, adept at script management.

Policies are masked and diluted to the point they mean all things to all people.

In the Capitol tragedy is co-equal with comedy. After all, it's an act.

Script writers, casting directors, lighting crews and make-up artists combine their skills to formulate a message lacking in credibility and truth.

It's a great masquerade.

It's a lie.

The biggest deception is found in the government's attempts to make us believe there is no deception.

We think what we see is real. We buy the story, accept the explanations, and applaud the actors. We vote them in to office again, and yet again.

We are desperate to believe. But this sort of desperation quickly becomes dependency.

Would you be one among us who is finally discovering that a hypnosis is being conjured to drift us off to sleep, to control us, to shut us up, to diminish and even, to the degree possible, eliminate our access to God-granted liberties?
